Miss Zoe Davis Becomes the Bride of Richard Calvert.

THEIR HOME TO BE IN INDIA

John Ridgely Carter to Visit Former Ambassador Choate at Stockbridge, Mass., Before Coming to Washington—Minister from Siam Plans a Visit to His Home.

Miss Zoe Davis, daughter of Brig. Gen. George W. Davis, U. S. A., was married at noon yesterday to Mr. Richard Calvert, of MacAlpin, Md., the ceremony taking place in the apartment of the bride's father, at the Connecticut, in the presence of only the immediate relatives of the two young people. The bride, who was unattended, wore a becoming gown of white tulle, built on white silk, with tulle veil, and carried a bouquet of orchids and lilies.

The marriage service was read by the Rev. George Calvert Carter, of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church.

Mr. Calvert is a son of the late Charles Baltimore Calvert, of Maryland, and, like his bride, has been a great traveler, and now resides at Bangalore, British India, for which distant home he and his bride will sail to-morrow. Mrs. Calvert, who has spent much of her life in Washington, accompanied her father to Porto Rico when he was military governor of the island, and also to Manila and to Panama, where he has more recently been on duty.

The German Ambassador, Freiherr Speck von Sternburg, and Freiherr von Sternburg have returned to the embassy from Beverly Farms, Mass., where they have been spending the summer and early fall. Accompanying them, and returning with them to their respective homes, were Count Hermann von Hatzfeldt-Wildenburg, first secretary; Prince Ljnar, a recently appointed attaché, and M. J. Koerner, military attaché.

The Bishop of Washington, the Rt. Rev. Dr. Satterlee, and Mrs. Satterlee, gave a reception yesterday afternoon from four to six, to the members of the diocese, in the Boys' Choir School, which had been tastefully decorated with autumn leaves, palms, and ferns.

Invitations had been sent through the different rectors of parishes to every member of the diocese, and despite the bad day, several hundred ventured out.

The bishop and his wife were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Barbour Walker, principal of the Girls' School, Mrs. William C. Rives, Mrs. John McGowan, Mrs. Richard P. Williams, Mrs. G. C. F. Bratenahl, Miss Satterlee. The music was furnished by the Marine Band, and refreshments were served.

The arrangements for the reception were made by the Rev. Messrs. G. C. F. Bratenahl and C. R. Stetson. A committee of the members of the Churchmen's League, headed by the president, W. H. Singleton, acted as usher.

Many prominent people were present, among them being Gen. John M. Wilson, Hon. John A. Kasson, Admiral McGowan and Mrs. McGowan, Col. and Mrs. G. L. Andrews, Mrs. Gardner G. Hubbard, Dr. William C. Rives.

Mr. John Ridgely Carter, a secretary of the American Embassy in London, with Mrs. Carter and Miss Carter, will leave New York to-day for a visit to former Ambassador Choate, at Stockbridge, Mass., before coming to Baltimore and Washington. Mr. Carter will not take a house in New York, as has been frequently stated, as he returns to London at the end of five weeks, when the Ambassador and Mrs. Choate will come to America to pass the holiday season.

Mrs. Carter and her debutante daughter will pass a part of the winter with relatives of the former in New York, which fact is believed to have given rise to the report of their becoming householders in that city.

Mrs. Powell Clayton, with her daughters, Mrs. Jones and Miss Clayton, is visiting her son-in-law and daughter, Baron and Baroness Mouchet, at the Belgian legation.

The Minister from Siam, with the secretary of his legation, Mr. Edward H. Loftus, and his daughter, left yesterday for New York to sail to-morrow on the Cedric for Liverpool. After a short visit in England the Minister will continue his journey to Siam, which country he has not visited since his appointment to his present post.

Col. and Mrs. George C. Reid accompanied the Minister and party to New York.

Mr. W. P. Cresson is visiting in New York, a guest at the Holland House.

Mrs. Titian J. Coffey will present the eldest of two attractive young granddaughters at a tea Tuesday, November 27, at her residence, 1713 K Street. Later in the season Mrs. Coffey will give a dance for young people.

Mrs. Samuel Spencer is making a short visit to the Martinique, New York.

Mrs. Basil Gordon has left the Virginia Hot Springs and is spending some time at the Hotel Stafford in Baltimore.

Mrs. Frank Hutton is at the Highlands, where she has taken an apartment for the winter.

Dr. and Mrs. Alexander Magruder have closed their summer home, near Frederick, Md., and opened their residence on H Street, where Miss Isabel Magruder will make her debut early in December.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Mitchell, the latter formerly Mrs. Augusta H. Hare, have returned from their short honeymoon trip and are established for the early season at Mrs. Mitchell's home, 120 Rhode Island avenue, where their marriage took place last week. Later in the year they will go abroad for an indefinite period.

The marriage is announced of Mrs. Evelyn Cordova, late of San Francisco, to Mr. Lewis J. Rogers, of the same city, temporarily residing in Washington. The ceremony will take place in December.

FOR THE FEMININE EYE.

This is the time when garments are remodeled or discarded entirely from the wardrobe, and if the latter course is taken it is hoped that clothing will go where it will do the most good. Most of us know families of growing children where every thing is turned to account, or some charity through which a wise distribution can be made, so there is no excuse for classing them as rags and throwing them away or burning them, as one ultra-neat housewife confessed was her custom.

Accumulations of old clothes are not desirable, but when they are not good enough to give away they can be sold to men who earn their living by dealing in such things. They do not pay much, and many of them are frightfully dishonest, but the transaction encourages business, and that is something, you know. Self-support is the condition to be fostered by every means at our command. An ashman has purchased three houses on the wages of twenty years' work and the sale of articles thrown away as useless by those homes he visits every week, in the way of business.

He is thrifty where others are prodigal. I know a small boy who has bought and paid for his school clothing this fall by collecting bottles, sorting them and selling them at the standard price among peddlers. Every family in his neighborhood has saved bottles for him, and he thoroughly posted is on the price of different grades that few try to cheat him. There seems to be a profit in any kind of business to which proper attention is given, even in door-to-door delivery of fresh eggs. An old man makes a living by collecting strictly fresh eggs, paying a better price for them than the market allows and selling at a margin of profit that makes the business worth while.

Of course, he has to be sure of the freshness of his wares, for his word goes with each egg, and one mistake might be fatal. The tradesman who is really interested in his work and means doing the square thing by everybody will cheerfully rectify blunders even when he is not personally responsible for them. The other kind is not worth one's notice, of course. I believe that there are fields of business that have not been half-worked. Take newspapers, for instance; most homes are overrun with them, and they form the bulk of the family waste barrel. Yet I have been offered fifty cents for one hundred pounds of newspapers, securely tied in neat bundles, and there is another profit on them farther down the line.

Waste paper is the bane of those engaged to keep streets clean, and waste paper has a money value. Here is one of our shiftless American ways. Papers are very useful about the house, and when they can be made a part of the household economy there is no thrift in selling. But the surplus is better turned into the channels of business than in making life harder for some poor mortals. Somewhere there is a use for practically all waste material, if we only seek to get some knowledge on the subject. We never can improve upon Nature's methods of using up every scrap for some good purpose—we would do well to be content to imitate her.

ceremony took place on Wednesday, October 17, at 1819 Q Street, Rev. Dr. F. McGowan, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, officiating. A small reception at the future home of Mr. and Mrs. Rogers followed the ceremony.

CREATIONS OF GREAT BEAUTY

Models on Display at Woodward & Lothrop's that Captivate the Feminine Visitor—Descriptions in Brief by Woman of Garments that Will Be Worn by Fashionable Folks.

The third floor of Woodward & Lothrop's was a scene of attraction yesterday to the modistes and fashion followers of Washington who regard the semi-annual openings of this firm as the standard of what prevails throughout the world in the line of smart apparel for women. Thursday marked the opening of a three-day exhibition of imported costumes, wraps, and blouses. The collection consists of garments selected personally by a representative of the firm in Paris, Vienna, and Berlin. If a man did the buying, a woman's taste was lack of it. Boudoiringly beautiful bodies this year bear the imported taste of blouses. When they range below $50 in price they may be classed with shirt waists.

The reception and evening gowns, displayed in a long vista of mirrors, palms, and cut flowers—the spaces marked with festoons of laurel rope—form a fascinating series of fashion tableaux. The foreign touch of such noted designers as Francis, Doucet, Hoffman, Paquin, Pupat, Ignace, Callot, Seours, and Meyer gives animation to even lay figures.

The shades of autumn are introduced in the foliage of massive oak trees, intensified in the masses of chrysanthemums, and confined in the exquisite designs of the costumes on exhibition.

One beautiful design by Francis is a reception gown of rose liberty crepe, circular in cut and finished with a knee length circular flounce with pipings of the same. A full, draped bodice of self-colored panne above a high girde, outlines a yoke of cream point. At the back is attached a wonderful skirt-length of the panne in what might be styled a modernized corset.

Another and especially modish robe in princess design is of white crepe, with perpendicular insets of Irish point that extend from the bust line to the knee, the edge of the skirt finished with a cluster of six tucks.

A chic model, by Raffin, is of fine square-mesh net in tau, with a wide flounce of elaborately embroidered broadcloth, the whole built upon an intense shade of green silk. The high, embroidered bolero is laced in front with green satin, and this touch appears again upon the elbow sleeves.

A Paquin model is shown of gray broadcloth, with draped panne bodice above a girde of softer gray and white silk, with frequent insets of lace in collar and yoke.

A pale rose broadcloth, in princess design, has a soft bodice of silk confined in decided rosettes at the bust—and buttoned sleeves of silk and lace.

Among the evening gowns, one of the most modish, by Raffin, is of pale gray chiffon over paste pink, flounced with narrow strips of tucked chiffon of a deeper shade and lace at intervals between the hem and waist. A girde of pompadour silk brightens the effect.

Another especially dainty design, by Agnes, built upon a pink foundation, is called white lace-net. Where one leaves off and the other fabric begins is difficult to say. The effect is of innumerable butterflies poised upon foam, and the one touch of material subdued seems to be the design, in crossed ribbons of inch-wide blue velvet, which appears several times on both skirt and decollete bodice. The top of the sleeves are caught with bunches of tiny pink rosebuds.

A point d'erep princess model by Agnes, has a wide white satin girde, yards upon yards of narrow tulle ruching and small rhinestone buckles.

The display of separate blouses is of enormous interest to women who will never allow this accessory to the wardrobe to go out of style. Possibly the most original of the designs is an Artus blouse of white messaline, made surplice style, and each fold of the material edged with a piping of green panne velvet and
